Wagner College students will sashay down the runway Friday for their Spring 2012 Fashion Show, "All You Need is Love."

Proceeds will be donated to LOVE146, a charity organization that works against child sex slavery and exploitation. A member of the organization's local chapter will be present to show a video about the charity during intermission.

"I wanted a theme that demonstrates the cohesive collision of fashion and love to allow freedom, and 'All You Need Is Love,' is just that theme," said Wagner College junior and co-chair of the event Alyssa Ahern. "It signifies the impact and power love for one another can have on the world."

A number of Island boutiques and stores in the Staten Island Mall have donated merchandise for the show, and will be in attendance in order to sell the products that are being featured on the runway.

Former Broadway "Rock of Ages" star, Mig Ayesa, has prepared a video message that will also be displayed during the show.

A pre-show party will begin at 5 p.m. in Spiro Sports Center, which will include food, raffle tables, a kissing booth, music, and other activities that have been planned by Wagner's Co-Curricular Programs board.

The show will begin at 7 p.m. with a suggested donation of $2 for students, $4 for children, and $8 for adults. Tickets can be had at the door.
