Coming together to denounce hate

Leaders and residents gather for unity rally to condemn anti-Semitic graffiti at yeshiva

Assemblywoman Krueger: "This is not an issue of the Jewish community or New York City. It's an issue of all of us. We are a diverse community in New York City." Rabbi Reuven Chaim Wills, Senior Rabbi at Temple Beth El, said that it is "a message of unity to those who are feeling frightened, threatened, or isolated."

"We are a diverse community and we are a strong community," Rabbi Sholom D. Berenbaum, the Interim Rabbi at the Chabad of Flatbush, said. "This is a community that fights back."

"We are not going to be intimidated," Rabbi Menachem Kamenetzky, the Director of the Chabad of Flatbush said. "We are going to stand up to this."